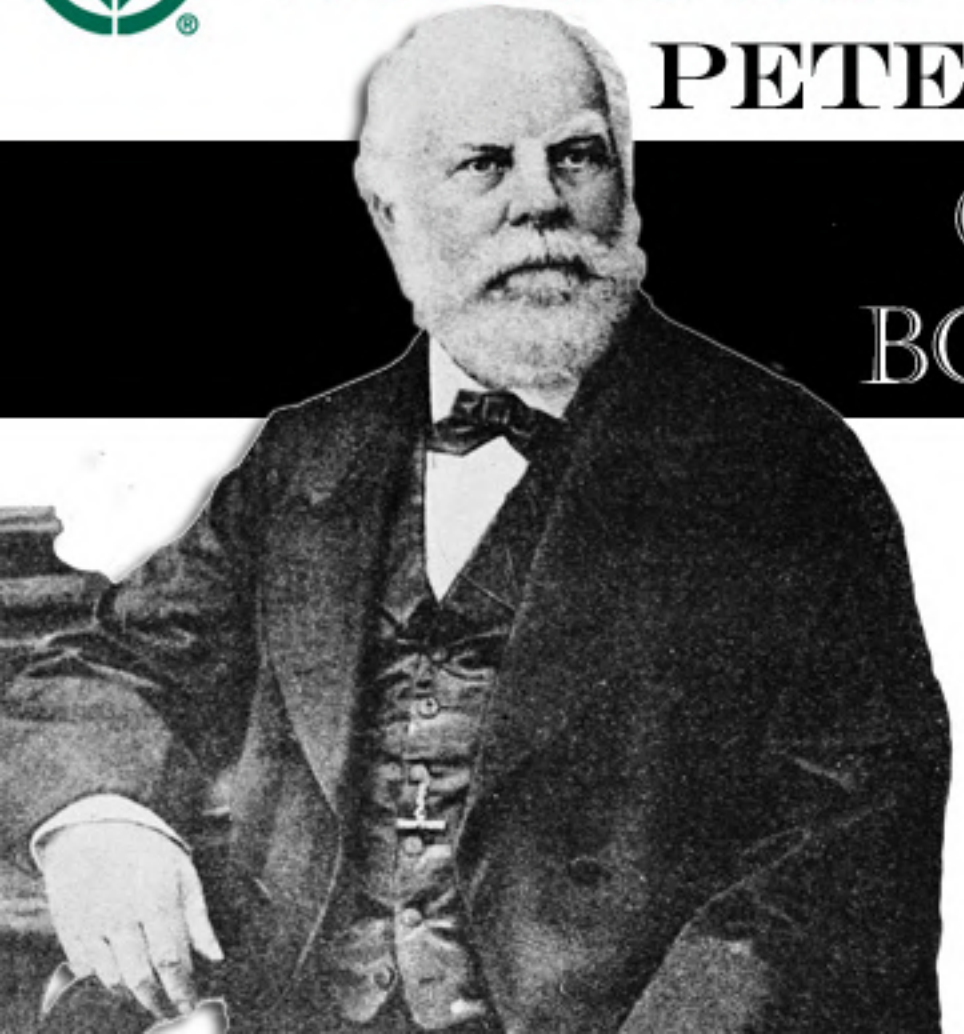
Missouri Botanical Garden

Peter H. Raven Library

George Engelmann Botanical Notebooks



Pagination Note:
Since many of the items lack a specific page number, the page number displayed online refers to the sequentially created number each item was given upon cataloging the materials.

Cars leave Ninth and Green Streets, Philadelphia, every hour.

Horse Cars connect with the cars in Germantown, direct to Upper Church Street.

Horse cars along Eighth Street direct to Upper Church Street.

Chestnut Hill Cars to Gorgas Lane Station, is ten minutes' walk from the Nursery.

Germantown Nurseries,

THOMAS MEEHAN, Proprietor,

Office, Upper Church & Chew sts., Germantown,

NEAR PHILADELPHIA.

Rec'd May 24 '76
Ans. June 30
Q. Tuttoi?
Statt & Schmitt

1876

May 22

Dear Sir

I have just received your favor of the 19th inst
and am sorry to see by your letter that you have been disappointed
in not receiving the trees ordered
by Mr. B.
I sent you a memorandum of them when I wrote you
two weeks ago
and in my correspondence with Carley and they seem to know of your application & disappointment
as Mr. B.
had been attended by Carley to examine. I forgot
if he said how he remembered them but he remembered that it happened he had no
selection to 2 of them
and he was going Carley to look after 2 & practically complete with 6212

3 weak wood. The culture Match in My 5 Set stored, is the most common form

as it indeed the rule with every thing in Cultivated Byeurth — more
culture leaves
the reproductive See Federa
Brassicaceae Capsi-
folium and others
and we must not forget this when we come to study our
This is only a word —
I will answer your letters as soon as I get my work in. Must go over and see

Germantown Nurseries.
THOMAS MEEHAN, Proprietor.
Office, Upper Church & Chew sts., Germantown,
NEAR 9TH AND GREEN, PHILA.
Ninth and Green Stree
delphia, every hour.
s connect with the cars
ntown, direct to Upper Church Street.
along Eighth Street dire
pper Church Street.
ill Cars to Gorgas Lane S
ten minutes' walk from the Nursery.

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

Cars leave Ninth and Green Streets, Philadelphia, every hour.

Horse Cars connect with the cars in Germantown, direct to Upper Church Street.

Horse cars along Eighth Street direct to Upper Church Street.

Chestnut Hill Cars to Gorgas Lane Station, is ten minutes' walk from the Nursery.

Germantown Nurseries,

THOMAS MEEHAN, Proprietor,

Office, Upper Church & Chew sts., Germantown,

NEAR PHILADELPHIA.

2

I am Dr Dunn Neal 787
2. aquatica heterophylla
is not merely a var.
but only the northern
most of forms of 2.
aquatica, that I am not convinced though I would like to know
of course what the result is.

Mrs. Burk
writes that I had not put the buds
of heterophylla are much larger than
2. Thellos, and there is aquatica
again.

Our northern Botanists have been misled in their views of 2. aquatica
by those specimens
almost entirely are only in mature pistillate plants, and 6213

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

Rec Aug 1st
Ans April 29

Athens Ala July 20th/876

Dear Engelmann

Your Card Rec'd. You ask if I know Q heterophylla - only from a single tree at Houston Texas & herbarium Specimens from Delaware & Bonham Sanders Did it not present in its self evidences of hybridity its rare occurrence in Single or few individuals at remote Stations would be evidence of it for true Species must have somewhere a Center of development where numerous individuals must exist and no such locality is known to my knowledge for heterophylla. & that it should be a true Species passing or at of existence is not probable from the fact that so far as I know the known Specimens are all young and apparently

6214

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GE RGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

I about equal age with the young growth of trees in the locality where they abound and must have commenced about the same time as you are aware these forest growths are from some cause commenced in a single year or at least within a very short period and all come up together
I have myself never seen a Specimen of Q. oliniaeformis Michx
or the rose now so called. nor have I ever seen the fruit of 2 macrocarpa resembling this hybrid approximating
it - but of Q alba fruit is found not dissimilar to any great extent must attend to it for you another year as you suggest

Yours truly

E Hall

Elihu Hall

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

Rio Nov 21 1877 Canby

I can't feel as if Lencaea Setacea Klotzsch was a hybrid. Apparently the two first discovered & these of later appearing are exactly alike &
this over a considerable extent of country. The only argument for its being a hybrid is that it is rare and, so far as we can judge, a cross between other species might make it. Again we have here from L. cinereo-fal cata which seeing that one supposed parent is not found within hundreds of miles seems an improba-bility.

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

6215

My wife desires her kind regards to you. My cordial respects to Mrs. Engelmann and you

Yours truly

J. W. Canby

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

katsoglylla 345-363

"Oh, I heard that she was an angel, of course," said Mrs. Hartley. "That, one takes for granted, and he gave me her photograph; it is lying about somewhere. Look on my little table under the newspaper, or under my work. Pretty enough; but you never can tell from a photograph. What is the matter with you, Anne?"

"I only tripped against the stool," said Anne, hastily turning her back to the light, and catching a glimpse of herself in the glass, which frightened her.

She was thankful to go with the photograph to the window after she had found it, the waning light being an excuse for her. The photograph was like a hundred others, such as every one has seen. A pretty young face, with the usual elaborate hair-dressing, and the usual elaborate costume. As for such things as expression or character, there were none in the so-called portrait, which might of course be the fault of the original; but this no one would dare to make sure of. It seemed to Anne, looking at it with her hot eyes, to swell and magnify, and smile disdainfully at her, as she gazed at it. She was still stupid with the blow, and, at the same time, was making so desperate an effort to restrain herself, that between the stunned sensation of that shock, and the self-restraint which she exercised, she seemed to herself to be like marble or iron, rigid and cold. The photograph fell out of her stiff fingers, and she had to grope for it on the floor, scarcely seeing it. All this occupied her so long that Mrs. Hartley became impatient.

"Well, have you nothing to say about it, now that you have seen it?" she asked.

"She is very pretty," said Anne, slowly. "I hope Francis will be very happy with her. Did he seem very much ——"

"Oh, he seemed all a young man ought to be, as foolish as you please," said Mrs. Hartley; "but he is coming home to dinner this evening, so you can question him to your heart's content. Give me a cup of tea, Anne. I think I shall go to my room and rest a little before dinner. There is nothing tires one like excitement," said the placid old lady; and she continued to talk about and about this great subject while she drank her afternoon cup of tea.

How glad Anne was when she left the room to take that nap before dinner; how thankful that she had a moment's breathing-time, and could, so to speak, look herself in the face. This was precisely the first thing she did when she was left to herself. She went up to the mantel-piece and leaned her arms upon it, and contemplated in the mingled light, half twilight, half ruddy gleams from the fire, the strange, forlorn, woe-begone face, that seemed to look back at her mournfully out of that rose-tinted gloom. The giddiness was beginning to go off a little, and the singing in her ears was less than it had been; the strange whirl and revolution of earth and heaven had ceased, and the things were settling down into their places. What was it that had happened to her? "Nothing, nothing," she said to herself, vehemently, the red blood of shame rushing to her face in a painful and tingling glow. Poor pretense; nothing was changed, but everything was different. The whole world and her life, and everything she was acquainted with, or had any experience of, seemed suddenly to have been snatched from her and thrown into the past. The very path she was treading seemed cut away under her feet. She had stopped short, startled, feeling deadly faint and sick when the sudden precipice opened at her feet; but there it was, and there did not seem another step for her to take anywhere upon solid ground. This sudden, wild consciousness of the difference, however, though it was bad enough, was not all. Bitter and terrible shame that it should be so, scorched up poor Anne. Shame flamed upon her innocent cheeks. Her eyes fell before her own gaze, ashamed to meet it. A man feels no such shame to have given his love to a woman who loves him not. He may be angry, jealous, mortified, and vindictive; but he is not abashed. But the woman who has given her heart unsought is more than abashed. She feels herself smitten to the earth as with a positive stain. Shame embitters and impoisons all her suffering. It is almost worse than a crime—it is a disgrace to her and to all womankind—or at least so the girl feels in the first agony of such a discovery, though her love may be as pure and devoted and unselfish as anything known in this world.

Then her thoughts all rushed to the question of self-defense. She must not make a show of herself and her emotions. She must smile and congratulate and gossip as if the event were one of the happiest which could have occurred, as she had done with a light heart when Letty and Susan were married. Their weddings had been the greatest gala-days she had ever known. She had been bridesmaid to both, with a fresh dress, and an important position, and much

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

6216

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

attention from everybody. She had taken the most genuine interest in everything that was done and said. Her life seemed to date indeed from these great occasions. And now must she go over all this, and probably be bridesmaid again to Francis's wife? Her very heart grew sick at the thought; but she must do it, must keep up, and give no one any reason to think—no one—that her heart was broken.

She was still standing thus, when the door opened, and Francis himself came into the room. Anne's heart gave a wild bound, and then seemed to stand still; but perhaps it was best that it should happen so, for she must have met him soon, and the room was dark, and he could not see how she looked. He came up to her where she stood, and took her hand, as he had a way of doing.

"Well, Anne," he said.

"Well, Francis," she returned faintly, as by some mechanical action, and withdrew her hand. She looked down into the fire, which threw a ruddy reflection on her face and disguised her paleness. She did not feel able to look at him.

"What's the matter?" said Francis, jauntily; "not displeased, are you? Of course my mother has told you," and he took her hand again. She dared not withdraw it that time, but had to leave it in his hold, though the poor little fingers tingled to their tips with the misery and bitterness and shame in her heart. All that he meant, of course, was friendliness, cousinship—while she—she, a woman, had allowed other thoughts to get entrance into her mind!

"I am not displeased," she said, summoning all her courage, "except that you did not give us any warning, Francis. You might have told me something about her; I was rather hurt at that."

"Were you, dear?" he said, with a tenderness that was unusual, and he put his other arm round her waist, as if somehow this new change had increased instead of diminishing his privileges. And Anne, poor Anne, dared not resent it—dared not break from him, as probably, laughing and blushing, she would have done yesterday. She had to stand still, making herself as stiff and cold as she could, enduring the half embrace. "If I had thought that, you should have known everything from the beginning; but it has not been a very long business; and, until I knew her sentiments, I saw no need to betray mine. It might have come to nothing, and a man does not care to make a fool of himself."

"Then tell me about her now," said Anne, holding firmly by the mantel-piece, and desperately plunging to the center of the misery at once.

Francis laughed.

"I don't know what I can say. I left her photograph somewhere, and I suppose my mother told you."

"Only that it was an excellent marriage, nothing about her."

Once more Francis laughed. He shrugged his shoulders, and bent down to look into her face.

"I suppose Letty and Susan raved of him to your sympathetic ears, did they? But men don't go in for that sort of thing. No; I want you to tell me, Anne, my dear little girl—look up, that I may see your face—are you pleased?"

"Francis! of course I am pleased if you are happy," faltered poor Anne; "but how can I tell otherwise, when I don't know her, and you won't tell me anything about her?"

"Give me a kiss then and wish me joy," he said.

Anne felt his cheek touch hers. There seemed to ensue a moment in which everything whirled round her—the fire-light, the pale evening sky through the window, the glimmer in the glass. Whether she should faint in his arms, or break away from them, seemed to hang upon a hair. But that hair-breadth of strength still remained to her. She escaped from his hold. She flew out of the room and upstairs like a hunted creature and dropped down upon her knees in her own little chamber, hiding her face on her bed. Had he suspected? Could he know? But in the passion that swept over her, Anne was beyond entering very closely into these questions. She dared not cry aloud or even sob, though nature seemed to rend her bosom; but the darkness fell on her mercifully, hiding her even from herself.

Mr. Francis Hartley remained behind and contemplated himself in the glass as Anne had done. He caressed his whiskers and drew his fingers through his hair, and said "Poor little Anne!" to himself with the ghost of a smile about the corners of his mouth. Yes, Anne was piqued, there was no doubt of it. Her little heart had been touched. Poor, dear little thing! it was not his fault; he had never given her any encouragement, and it was hard if a man could not be kind to his little cousin without raising hopes of that sort in her mind. But he liked Anne none the worse for her

G. heteroptylla Mx Michx figure gives leaves 3–4" × 1–1½" petioles about 6"'

NJ & mts to Ga, C.C. Smith 3½–4" × 9–12"
petiole 3–5"
Marshallsgarde 3½–6" × 10–14"' pet 3–4"
Darby Gard 1869 3½–6" × 12–24"' pet 2–6
Gray & 1869 fruit 4–5½" × 10–15"' pet 3–6" Vernier 1869. 5–6 × 15–24"' pet 4–7
Rensham 1857 3½–6 × 12–22"' pet 3–9

Phillips, Ga 1874 flower 3" × 6"' pet 3
petiole
Hort Parkman petiole 4–5 × 9–12"' pet 3–4"

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
copyright reserved
0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 cm

alleny of its Correspondents,

it returns a grateful acknowledgment.

Joseph Henry

Sec. S. I.

stitution,

City, U. S. A., Ap. 27, 1876.

GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

6217

"Bartram's Oak"

May 30 1876

from Canby

from

suck of very leaf

x 10

x 10

very thick under back of

Lower side of leaf pretty revolute yet

x 2

most heavy entire

some with a

Setaceous tooth

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

6218

Leitch & Corlies
WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS
South West Corner Fifth and Market Streets.

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

G. heterophylla

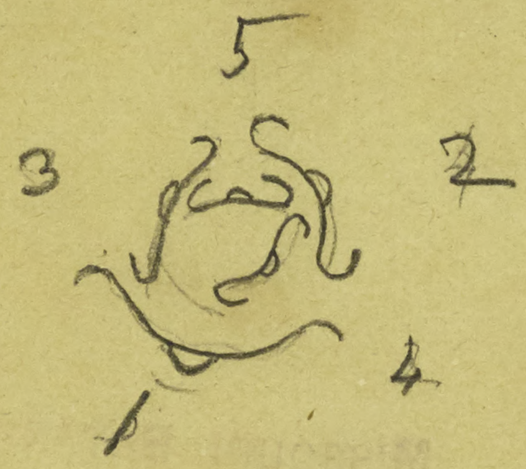
May 5 77

Welsonville Del

2 III-7 77

X 2

back of very young leaves

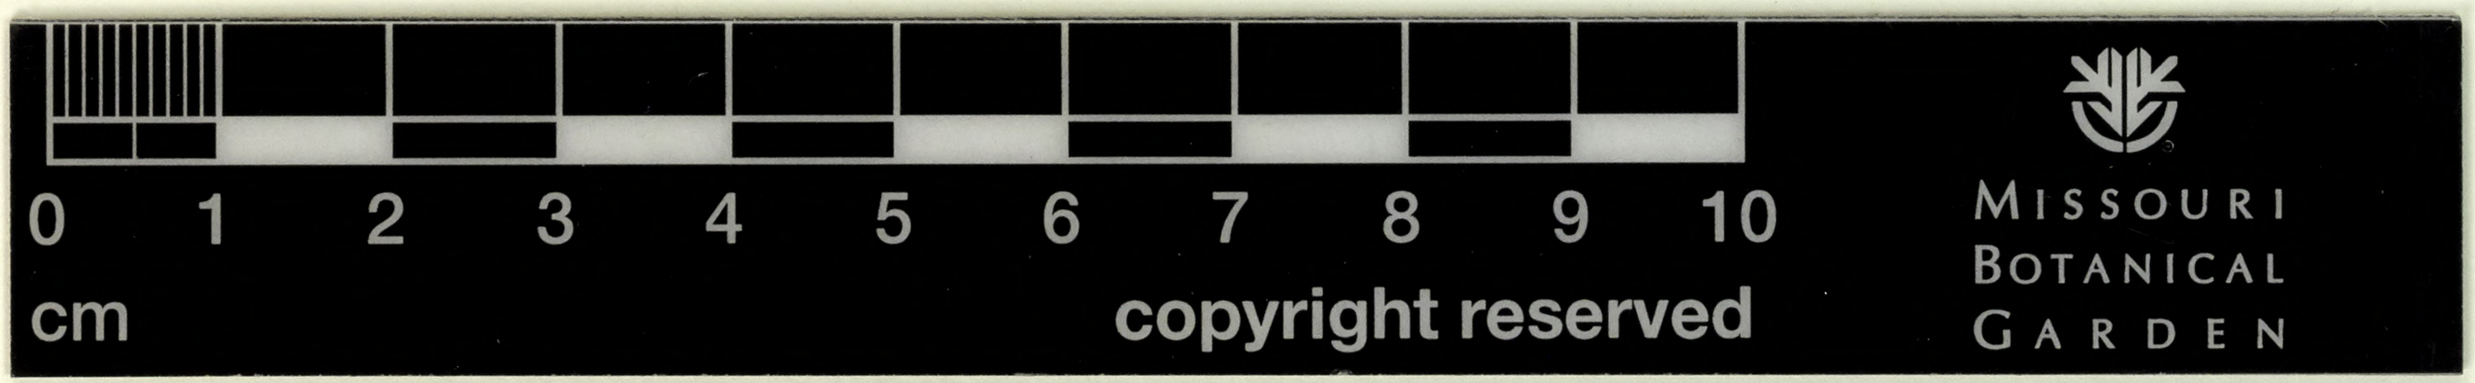


0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

6219

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS

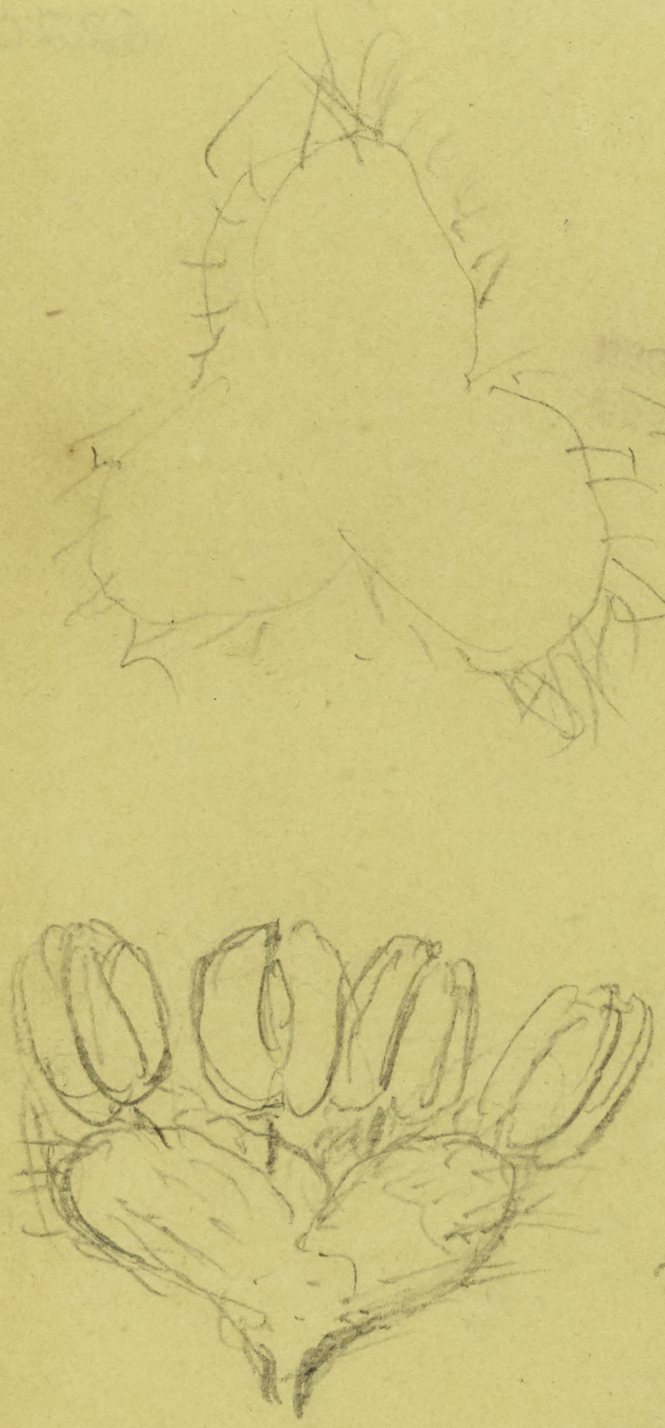
Leitch & Corlies
DRUGGISTS
South West Corner Fifth and Market Streets



May 20 1877

G. heterophylla

Mexico May 14



anthers 1.2-1.3 cm
usually 4
rarely 3 or 5

St. Louis, Mo.
Botanical Garden
Missouri

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

Deutsche Apotheke.

GEO. UDE,

Apothecary and Druggist

No. 3610 North 10th Street,

Between Mallinckrodt and Salisbury, ST. LOUIS, MO.

No. 187

For .....

Rp.

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
GEORGE ENGELMANN PAPERS 6220

cm 0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

March 28 1874

Pollen x 415

9. sinuata

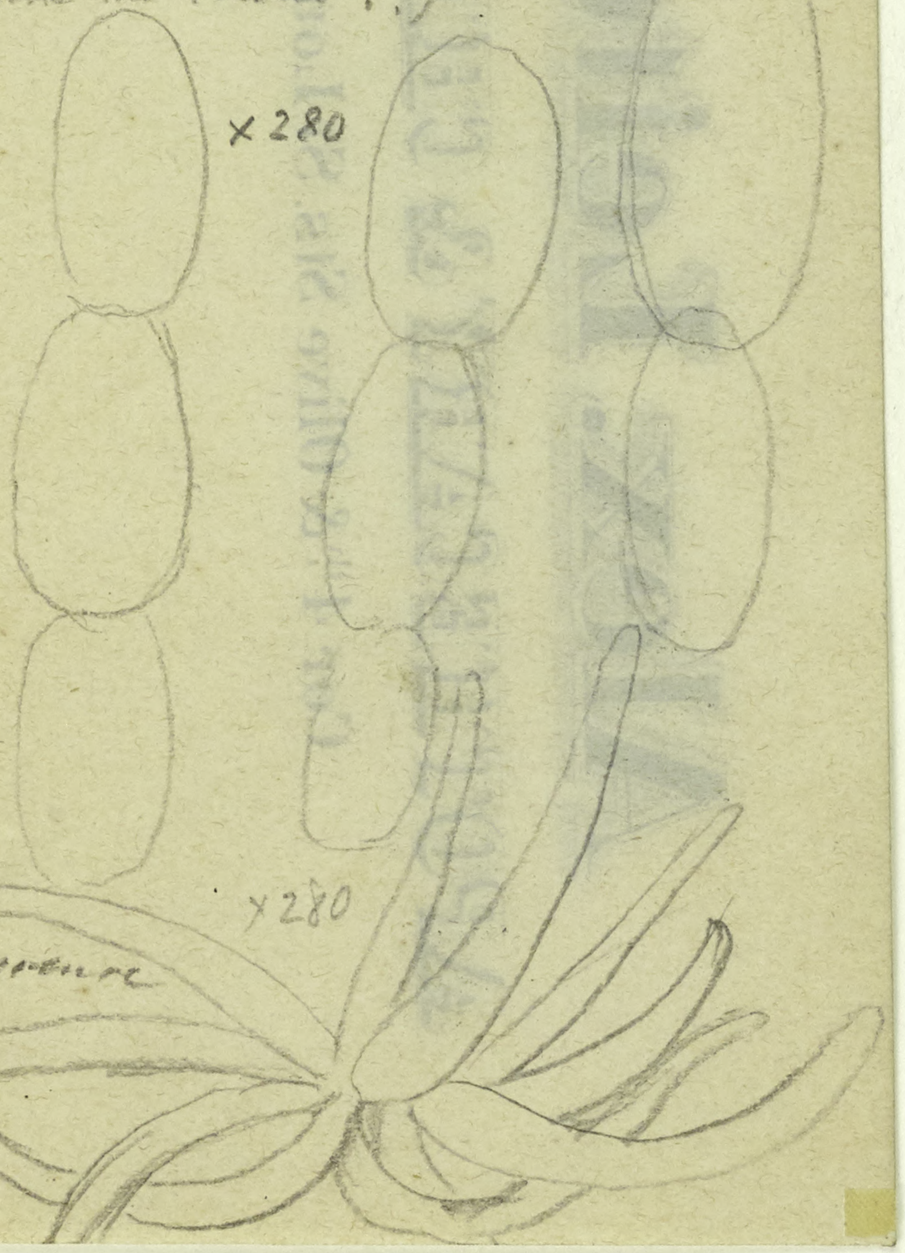
Bempton. S. Carol. Dr Mell. herb. 23/3 74

×10

very deciduous yellow glutinous 2-4 celled hair on young leaves

Thickly studded with Pollen (whence the colour?)

×280



This yellow glutinous pubescence was seen also on 9. cinerea, sinuata Cates bair

star hair pubescence

×280

hairs 1-celled

×280

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

Alex. Leitch,

APOTHECARY & CHEMIST,

Cor 4th & Olive Sts. St. Louis.

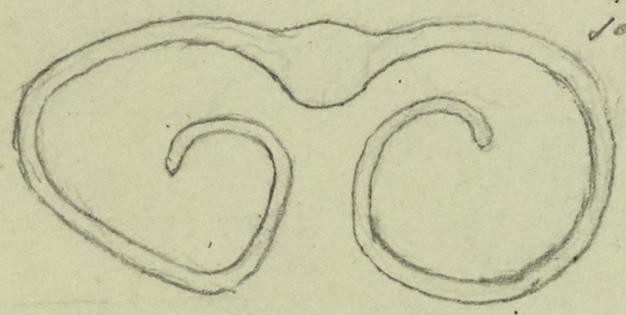
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
LIBRARY AND ARCHIVES

1269

cm 0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

9. Phellos (nov.) Jun 1876 9. heterophylla May 26 1874
Wm Covington Del, Wm M. Canby from integr. Fresh

Sect. of a very young leaf ×10



Sect. of an older leaf ×10

×10

×10 3-4 stamens

Young leaves rolled up backwards — perfectly smooth on both sides

fl. almost glabrous, slight beard at top of calyx — rhachis with scattered hair

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
cm
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

Deutsche Apotheke.

HENRY DIERS,

APOTHECARY,

South East Corner Fifth aud Biddle Streets,

ST. LOUIS. MO,

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN
PAPERS

6222

cm 0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
copyright reserved
MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN